

For years, she was hidden behind locked doors—her name changed, her past erased, her future rewritten by those who claimed to protect her.

But when the boy who once knew her real name returns, he brings with him the truth she was never meant to remember.

Now, Laila must decide: remain buried in the life she was forced into... or rise and dismantle the empire built on her silence.

As secrets begin to crack open and the world that controlled her closes in, one thing becomes clear—she's not just escaping. She's coming back.

And this time, she won't be silenced.

But as the fire spreads and the people who rewrote her watch her return... one question remains:

Can you truly destroy a system that made you disappear in the first place?
